1. (S-SS) Statistics: Viewer: 018
Session date: 14 MAR 88
Start time: 1350
End time: 1458
Mode of operation: CRV

2. (S-SS) Cueing:

- a. 6-digit encrypted coordinates.
- b. Provide a general description of the site.
- c. Provide a time line which indicates any significant events on it.

3. (S-SS) Results:

a. There was an immediate overpowering impression of a very sickly sweet smell (while still in stage I) which seemed to be somehow related to the general area. The overall appearance of the area was one of a high place, looking out over a wide valley and across to what appeared like low, green rolling hills on the other side.

b. The site has a structure which appears to be built of very solid masonry or solid stone. Each part of the structure in which I found myself had arches and/or columns.

1) From the front, the structure seemed to be a large squarish building with a rounded area of columns in front.

2) A location within the structure appeared to be a long outside porch or portico-type walkway along one side of the building (see drawing, page 9). It was lined with archways, overlooking the wide valley. The archways were also built overhead along the walkway, but did not appear to block the sun from overhead. The condition of the walls was very run-down, with peeling plaster and many bare spots.

3) There seemed to be people located within covered areas, open on the sides, and supported by arching columns. The place was very light and airy, with all light coming from the open walls on the sides of the covered area. This entire area gave the impression of having many hyperbolic-paraboloid shapes (explanation: those multiple-curved surface shapes which are found in large rooms which have many columns supporting the ceiling, each column being part of 4 archways which meet the arches of other columns in the room).

c. The people at the site fit into three categories:

1) A first type of people inside the structure seemed to be mostly or all male. There was a very "show of masculinity" feel about the people in this place, but everyone seemed to be unhurriedly just passing time, with no feelings of worries or concern. These people seemed to be somewhat intelligent, and somehow in control. There were several impressions of uniform-colored clothes and guns to some of these people. These people seemed to be in the majority there.

2) Another type of people inside the structure gave the very definite impression of wearing white robes and funny-looking white hats (AOL: like sailors' "dixie cups"). These people were only seen walking from one place to another, but usually very briskly.

3) Another type of person was repeatedly perceived as being very near the structure, but not in it. This type person could best be described as a "goatherd", with all its accompanying impressions.

d. A stage 6 time-line was drawn (see page 13), going from present time (0), to a point identified only as "10" (no explanation provided as to time increments). There were three significant events perceived:

1) The first (approximate location: 0.5) had a feeling of becoming aware of something pleasant and hopeful.

2) The second (approximate location: 4) had a very sudden feeling of "easy freedom" (ADL: like suddenly taking off tight shoes, becoming well after a long sickness, or sinuses suddenly clearing up.)

3) The third (approximate location: 7-8) was a slow rise with a fairly sudden dropoff or letdown. There was an accompanying feeling that the third event might not be directly related to the other two.
